

The Grand River Creative Corridor, also known as “GRCC Detroit”, is an art corridor and neighborhood revitalization project concentrated on Grand River Avenue between Rosa Parks Boulevard and Warren Avenue in Detroit, Michigan.

Launched on July 15, 2012 by real estate executive and managing director of “4731”, Derek Weaver, the project features over 100 murals on 15 buildings; an outdoor fine-art gallery at a bus stop; free-standing art installations; a clean-up of overgrown vegetation, trash, and vandalism; and an economic stimulus project for local businesses.

Members of the Farmington Art Foundation, Jan Corrigan, Lisa Barette, Ann Carlson, Ann Cleary, and Cathy Szumlinski have created a mural to join others in the outdoor fine-art gallery.
